

ADMINISTRATIVE MEMORANDUM

VPAA 18-01

March 12, 2019

Replaces VPAA 17-01

SUBJECT: ACADEMIC AFFAIRS POLICY ON SUPPORT FOR NON-CITIZEN FACULTY - VISA ACQUISITION

SERVICES PROVIDED BY THE CAMPUS:

HSU does not provide legal advice regarding immigration issues or matters. Faculty members who require advice regarding their individual immigration status or a specific issue regarding their status should consult with a qualified immigration attorney.

H-1B Visa Sponsorship

The H-1B is an employer-sponsored nonimmigrant classification which allows persons who are not citizens or permanent residents to work in the U. S. When appropriate and consistent with the interests of the University, HSU will apply for an H-1B visa on behalf of a probationary faculty member.

Usually, an H-1B visa will allow the faculty member to work in the U.S. for up to 6 years. The H-1B visa is initially valid for three years and can usually then be extended for another three years. There are some limited exceptions to the maximum six year period of stay. However, those exceptions are extremely limited.

At the expiration of the maximum period of time, the faculty member must leave the U.S. or have obtained a different status allowing the faculty member to remain employed in the U.S. In general, the calculation of the maximum period of time includes only the time the faculty member actually spent within the U.S. while under H-1B status. The calculation of time does not include any time spent by the faculty member outside of the U.S. while under H-1B status.

Applications for an H-1B visa will be processed through the Center for International Programs. The probationary faculty member is responsible for providing any and all information or documentation that is required to submit the application, including certified copies of conferred degrees and transcripts (translated into English if necessary) and visa/passport documents. A failure to timely provide any required information and/or documents to the University may delay submission of the H-1B visa application and, consequently, may negatively affect the faculty member's ability to work at HSU.

Permanent Residence Sponsorship

When appropriate and consistent with the interests of the University, HSU will sponsor a faculty member for permanent residency based on employment-based eligibility. Applying for and obtaining a so-called "Green Card" is a multi-step and lengthy process. The actual processing time will vary from case to case, and can take years in some instances. Delays can occur during the processing, depending on the specific facts of each case. In general, the Green Card process involves three steps.

Step No. 1: An application for a permanent labor certification must be submitted by the University and approved. This is often referred to as the PERM process.

The University must submit the permanent labor certification application within 18 months after the formal written offer of employment is issued by the University official authorized to do so. If the application is not submitted within the required 18 months, (i) a new candidate search, competitive recruitment and selection process must be conducted and (ii) a new formal written offer of employment must be made.

Step No. 2: Once the permanent labor certification application is approved, an I-140 visa petition can be filed on behalf of the faculty member. Depending on circumstances, the I-140 may be filed either by the University or the faculty member's legal representative. Faculty members should contact the Center for International Programs for further information. The I-140 must be filed within 180 days after approval of the permanent labor certification application. If the I-140 is not filed within the required 180 days, the permanent labor certification becomes void and Step No.1 has to be re-done.

Step No. 3: Once the I-140 visa petition has been approved, the faculty member can file an I-485 adjustment of status application. The filing of the I-485 application is the mechanism through which one actually applies for permanent resident status and the Green Card is issued.

The University is responsible for completing Step No. 1. The faculty member is responsible for completing Step No. 2 and Step No. 3.

COSTS:

H-1B Visa

The hiring department or college is responsible for paying (i) the basic filing fee for the H-1B petition (including any subsequent extension) and (ii) the Fraud Detection and Prevention Fee. The faculty member cannot be required to pay these two fees.

The basic H-1B petition filing fee is to be paid from a non-General Fund source. the Fraud Detection and Prevention Fee may be paid either from the General Fund or from a non-General Fund source.

In cases where Premium Processing is requested, the faculty member should normally pay the fee for premium processing. The hiring department or college should pay this fee if, and only if the need for premium processing is a direct result of a delay caused by the University itself, or if premium processing is needed to address an immediate and express business need of the University.

The cost for mailing all documents in the H-1B visa acquisition process is borne by the sponsoring department.

The faculty member is responsible for paying for the costs of translating into English all required foreign degrees and foreign education credentials evaluation.

The faculty member is responsible for paying for all attorney fees or costs incurred as a result of the faculty member seeking advice, direction or information.

The University is required to notify the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services of any material change to the terms and conditions of a faculty member's approved H-1B status. In the unlikely event that the material change results in the faculty member's loss of status to remain in the U.S., the hiring department or college must offer to pay the cost of return transportation to the faculty member's last foreign residence.

Permanent Residence

The University is responsible for all costs and fees associated with Step No. 1, that is, all fees and costs necessary to complete the PERM process.

The faculty member is responsible for all costs and fees associated with Step No. 2 and Step No. 3. This includes all attorney fees and costs incurred in order to prepare and file the I-140 visa petition and the I-485 adjustment of status application. To ensure the I-140 and I-485 are properly prepared, the faculty member will require qualified immigration legal assistance.

REQUIREMENT:

Specific lawful job-related reasons why the alien is qualified will be required. This information is utilized during the process to gain permanent resident status at a later date.
